

American College of Neuroscience Administrators to Host Inaugural Meeting at AAMA Annual Conference

Do you have interests or responsibilities in neuroscience administration?

If so, connect with your colleagues with similar interests at the inaugural meeting of AAMA's newest college, the American College of Neuroscience Administrators (ACNA).

When: 4:30 – 5:30 pm, Wednesday, November 16, 2011

Where: 2011 AAMA Annual Conference at the Scottsdale Plaza Resort

Developed for service line administrators specializing in the broad area of neuroscience, the new group covers neurosurgery and neurology, involving stroke, PMR (including acute rehab), sleep medicine, ortho (spine), rheumatology, neuro-oncology, epilepsy, Parkinson's, neuro-psychiatry, EEG-EMG, otolaryngology and related concerns.

Those attending the college's inaugural meeting will help select its first formal leaders, focus the group's initial program development, and confirm its Mission, Vision and Values statements. Preliminary statements were developed by the new group's steering committee for review during the meeting:

- Mission: To advance excellence in neuroscience leadership through individual relationships, multi-disciplinary interaction, ongoing education and active engagement.
- Vision: To be the recognized catalyst for inspiring neuroscience administrators to advance themselves in positions of leadership.
- Values: Integrity in leadership innovation, collaboration in neuroscience service line development, respect for individual expertise and knowledge, and commitment to the organization, its Mission, Vision and Values.
